near. I heard her say -

“Sarah, come and sleep with me in the nursery; I daren’ t for my life be alone with that poor child tonight:

she might die; it’ s such a strange thing she should have that fit: I wonder if she saw anything.

Missis was rather too hard.”

Sarah came back with her; they both went to bed; they were whispering together for half-an-hour before they fell asleep. I caught scraps of their conversation, from which I was able only too distinctly to infer
